

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

- Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

The week's topic of Personality differences was very important to teamwork because it is fundamental. Everyone is not the same, so the need to identify that and learn how to deal with it will be instrumental in the need to make a team acutely work.

- How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

My new plan is to adapt to my team and their personalities. I have found that the way I think is very different than most people I have interacted with in this major. My group also is particularly quiet so it is up to me to help them come out and share their fantastic ideas.

- How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

I have loved looking at the personality's of the girls I have tried dating and I have done my best to adapt to how they behave and think and it led to great friendships that lasted a long time. I bet if could relate it to the teamwork in class because the basic principles are the same.

- Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

I was able to teach my friend Lauren about the personality test and how different people are comparable and compatible if we are willing to take the time to adjust how we live. I think she was able to look introspectively more than usual and think about how she approached her current friendships and teammates.

- If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

I would relate how each one of us come to earth with specific talents and that we are all different spiritual beings with potential. If we take the time to follow the great commandments love one other and our selves we could unite all our strengths for the betterment of all of us.