

Name: Parker Jackman

Total Points 100

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

- Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

The topic of understanding our weaknesses is important because if we don't know where we need to improve then we won't be able to improve. Improvement is the start of any good teammate.

- How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

I plan on actively taking the time to try to improve my ability to listen to other peoples ideas, about how I can improve so I can be of more help in future discussions.

- How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

The class activity where we had to look at our weaknesses and think about how we can improve reminded me a lot about my mission and my desire to do better for my companions sake. Now I want to be able to improve so I can help my teammates succeed by being the teammate that they need.

- How does your experience relate to other classmates' experiences?

When I listened to my teammates talk about how they did on the survey and how they wanted to change, it helped me want to change to help them. That was cool to see that our interests in mutual improvement for the others sake was astounding. Now I am curious how many people I stop from improving because I am too stubborn to let the succeed

- If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

I would compare our need to learn how to improve ourselves and being readily available for others to the atonement of Jesus Christ. I would explain that if we are to emulate Christ we need to be there for others. The way to be more like Christ is to strive for improvement.