

Name: Parker Jackman

Total Points: 100

20 pts Questions Cognitive: (Wow, I learn?... Ok that is deep!)

- Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

If we don't understand why we want to work then we will just be hoping that we will work. If we understand we will be able to work in almost any situation. That makes this weeks topic worth all the time we spend on it.

- How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

As I have been looking into how I look at the world and especially my work I have realised that the way I interpret work is a little different than most. Knowing that will be crucial in how I work with teams. I will have to adjust how I approach group projects based on how my team thinks of work. Shared understanding leads to success.

- How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

When we took the time in class to write down how we felt about work it helped me come to terms with how I have been feeling recently about work and motivate me to get moving again. This reminds me of when I had felt lost in my job at a hardware store because I couldn't find a reason to work until I sat down one day and wrote it down in my journal and it helped pull me back to reality.

- Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before?

This week I was able to teach a friend about how important it is to be forthcoming about our feelings when it comes to expectations and attitude in a friendship/teamwork. They learned that when they are not good about sharing their feelings on the matter it can really hurt others.

- If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

The gospel is based on Jesus Christ and his gospel. Our attitude towards Him is a big way we quantify our efforts. Taking the time to look at our attitudes in religious activities will help us work as a team with Jesus Christ.